AAUP taking its case to UNL faculty

By CHRIS NIGRIN
Gateway Editor

The UNL chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) will spend this month taking its case to the faculty on campus, according to chapter president Robert Haller.

Haller, professor and graduate chairman of English at UNL, said his group will direct their "educational campaign" at "different parts of the college in different ways." The AAUP will be trying to convince faculty members to allow the group to represent them in collective bargaining negotiations.

Haller said the group will be asking faculty to sign a "hard card," which says that the signer authorizes the AAUP to serve as an agent in collective bargaining and that calls on the Commission of Industrial Relations to call an election.

He said the group's preliminary meetings have focused on identifying issues across the campus. Various committees have been formed to help get the word out he said.

Under the law, 30 percent of those defined in the bargaining unit would have to sign cards for an election to be called. Haller said, however, the AAUP chapter won't act unless it receives 70 percent of the signatures of those eligible to vote. "We don't want an election just for an election's sake," he said. "We want to be sure we'll win."

The Lincoln chapter held an election in 1976, which it lost 503-634. Haller said that the vote proved the AAUP had a lot of support in 1976, adding that it had additional support now.

Haller said the bargaining unit, which totals somewhere between 1,200-1,400 faculty, would include the same groups it did in 1976. All full-time faculty, librarians, extension agents research persons at the agricultural institute and department chairpersons are part of the unit.

The Law and Dental Colleges, management personnel, and all those holding rank above department chairpersons, including deans and heads of schools, will be excluded, Haller said.

He said if his group was successful with the petition drive, it would go to the NU Board of Regents and ask it to accept the UNL AAUP as that campus agent without an election. However, Haller said, this is not a practical plan, adding that the regents probably would not accept the idea. "They have a long history" of trying to delay and interfere with collective bargaining processes, he said.

The AAUP hopes to bring the matter before the board in December if it has enough signatures, and to present the cards to the industrial relations commission in January. If this timetable is followed, the commission would probably order an election to take place in mid to late March, Haller said, adding that any number of things could delay the process.

The recent 216-176 vote to accept the AAUP as the faculty bargaining agent at UNO "helps in some ways, but hurts in others," he said. Some believe that since the results of collective bargaining at UNO won't be known for awhile that the Lincoln group should "wait and see." Haller said others believe that UNO has shown its unprofessionalism and that UNL will receive all the benefits UNO does plus more from the regents for being "quiet."

Some faculty members think it is "unwise to let UNO decide the working conditions" and that the campuses should work together in deciding the University role and mission.

'We're more like sisters' Classmates unique

By DON MEISSNER
Gateway Staff Writer

It is uncommon today to see a mother and daughter going to school at the same time and same place. But Ruth and Melanie Williams are exception.

Not only do Ruth and Melanie go to school together, they both are English majors and take a lot of the same classes together.

Ruth, the mother, says she enjoys taking classes with her daughter. "She does most of the work, and then summarizes the material for me," she said.

Melanie says they are more like sisters than mother and daughter. "But I usually scold her more than she scolds me," she said.

"She constantly has to remind me," said Ruth, "to keep my mind off of the boys and to get to work."

They both agree the mother-daughter relationship is reversed in their case. But the teachers seem very interested in the situation.

"In our literature class," said Ruth, "We both raise our hands at the same time . . . and the teacher has a hard time deciding on which to choose."

"He doesn't know whether to choose her out of respect," said Melanie, "or me to be fair."

Both are "B" students. Melanie said she gets the grade because of her discussion in class while her mother gets it by her eloquent wording on the tests.

"Yes," said Ruth, "I'm going for my BS degree."

Ruth who is 40 years old, came to Omaha from Minneapolis with a small acting group to open the "Sweetness and Light" theater in the old market. Ruth was an actress for ten years before she came here.

"But in 1970," she said, "all that was down at the old market were farmers and winos and they would shout 'Bring on the girls!'" The theatre did not go over too well and was replaced by Satan's Pizza.

Ruth said the rest of the group went on to Denver to try and open a theatre there, but she stayed behind in order to work for the Nebraska Psychiatric Institute, helping troubled and disturbed children.

"I didn't want to be an actress anymore," said Ruth. She then started at UNO in the spring of 1979. She attended Columbia College 20 years ago and earned her Associate of Fine Arts degree. All of her credits transferred, so she is presently a junior.

Melanie is a freshman. She started school during the summer after working as an assistant horse trainer for several horse training stables. She worked as a hot-walker at Ak-

Cage star Derrick Jackson dropped for 1979-80 season

By MIKE KOHLER
Gateway Sports Editor

UNO basketball coach Bob Hanson has suspended team captain and All-North Central Conference guard Derrick Jackson from the squad for the entire season for disciplinary reasons.

Jackson's dismissal stemmed from an altercation which occurred in a practice session last Friday in which Jackson spat upon a teammate after an exchange of words.

Hanson said the suspension was simply a disciplinary matter and that he would have no further comment on any aspect of it. He said the reason he will not elaborate is that he can see no one benefiting from any discussion of the issue.

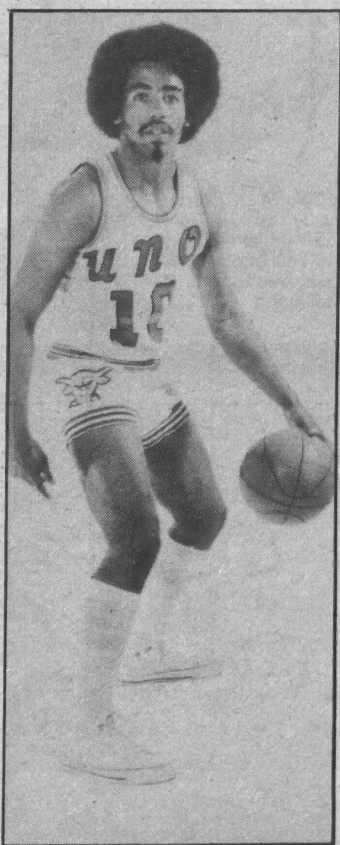

In addition, Hanson said he will not respond to any statements made by Jackson because he (Hanson) has no intention of carrying on a verbal battle through the press.

Hanson said he had talked over the matter with the rest of the players and that practice has resumed at its normal pace. In fact, one player said Monday's workout was one of the Mavs' best of the season.

Hanson said he pondered the decision carefully over the weekend, adding that the decision leaves the door open for Jackson to return to the team next season.

Jackson said his suspension was the culmination of a long spell of differing opinions between he and Hanson. The senior guard said he learned of his suspension when he went to the coach's office before practice Monday.

Jackson said he still plans to graduate in May and that playing next year seems unlikely. Jackson will retain his basketball eligibility for next season if he does not play this year.

The practice skirmish erupted when Todd Trofholz apparently became upset with what he felt was a lack of serious effort by some players during a scrimmage. When Trofholz expressed his concern, Jackson responded with the action which led to his dismissal.

"I know it was something I shouldn't have done," said Jackson. "I planned on apologizing to him."

Jackson said a "lot of differences in philosophy" in basketball existed between he and Hanson. "When I was a freshman, I used to speak out a lot, but I gained maturity and learned to live with the monkey on my back. I know you have to do what the coach says."

One of the things Jackson had to live with was a six-game benching at the start of last season. Jackson returned to the lineup after a UNO losing spell to spark the Mavs to a holiday tournament title, the conference championship, and an appearance in the Division II post-season playoffs.

Besides being named all-conference, Jackson was named to the regional all-star squad and led the nation in free throw accuracy.

Though all the players contacted preferred anonymity, the consensus opinion of the Mav basketballers was that Hanson was justified in taking action against Jackson.

"I think we would have lost a lot of respect for Coach Hanson if he hadn't done anything about it," said one player. Another player said, "The penalty may have been a little tough, but everybody knew that Coach (Hanson) needed to do something."

Star forward Rick Wilks, a close friend of Jackson and part of the renowned "Deuce" combination with the guard, refused to make any comment on the issue, as did Trofholz.

Athletic Director Don Leahy said he talked with Hanson about the incident but that the decision was entirely up to Hanson. Leahy said that after reviewing the circumstances he was satisfied with the disposition of the matter.

Researchers learning to control genes

By CHRIS NIGRIN
Gateway Editor

An estimated 15 percent, or one in six of all conceptions are "grossly, genetically abnormal," according to Dr. Jim Eisen, professor of human genetics at the Medical Center and director of the sperm bank.

Genetic abnormalities are a part of everyday life, Eisen said Tuesday at the second in a series of brown bag luncheons at the University Religious Center. He spoke on "Potential for Genetic Change in Society," as part of the "Issues of the '80s" series.

The genetic conditions that medical researchers recognize have doubled in the last eight years, he said. However, he said, some of the developments in the genetics field are "controversial scientific advances" that shock some people.

Fifty percent of first trimester miscarriages are due to genetic abnormalities, according to Eisen, who also is director for the Center of Human Genetics. "It's nature's way of taking care of the mistake." One and one-half percent of newborn children have genetic abnormalities, such as mental retardation, he said.

One of the recent developments in the field has included genetic engineering, "modifying the genes," he said. Researchers have begun to manufacture genes and insert them into lower organisms, he said, adding that the gene for insulin has been inserted into bacteria, producing it cheaper than the way it is now — from the pancreas of cows.

The UNMC sperm bank is used by couples who can't have children and decide on artificial insemination, by men planning to have vasectomies but who want some sperm preserved, and by men who will become sterile due to some type of treatment like chemotherapy, he said.

The sperm bank videotapes the semen specimens for legal reasons, Eisen said. If the center is sued by a donor it would be able to prove the semen quality, he said. Also, the videotapes are used for research. The sperm is frozen in liquid nitrogen at minus 121 degrees Celsius (minus 391 degrees Fahrenheit).

The main sperm donors are medical students, who are paid $25 for the donation, he said, adding that medical students tend to be responsible and have a knowledge of their family genetic history.

When a woman comes to the sperm bank for artificial insemination, a donor is matched with physical characteristics as near those of her husband as possible. The husband must sign papers stating he will recognize the child and support it, Eisen said.

An issue that has not been settled in Nebraska is whether a wife who has been artificially inseminated can be sued for adultery during divorce proceedings, Eisen said. This has happened in four states, he said.

Other uses for genetical research include screening for diseases such as sickle cell anemia, he said.

The voluntary genetic screening for sickle cell anemia has been done among the black population, where one in 10 has the gene for sickle cell anemia trait, he said. It is a disease that causes early death. When two carriers of the gene conceive the chances are one in three that the child will have sickle-cell anemia.

The screening program is to inform carriers that they are potentially at risk and to give them four choices: Not to get pregnant, to take their chances, to opt for artificial insemination or to undergo amniocentesis. Amniocentesis is a process by which embryonic fluid is withdrawn from the pregnant woman's uterus and analyzed to discover if the fetus is defective.

Mom, daughter...

Sar-Ben, then she became a groom for some stables in Southern California. When she moved back to Nebraska, she worked as an assistant trainer for a thoroughbred training center in Elkhorn, Neb.

Melanie enjoys horses, drawing, literature, and drama. Raised in theatre greenrooms, she said she eventually wants to get her degree in dramatic arts, but for now is going for her English degree to help her acting. "Well, drama is literature," she said.

Ruth's hobbies include studying Freud, reading classic literature, her cat, and a man.

"My real interest right now is to get married again and have a baby," said Ruth. "Saying I want to be a teacher and being able to qualify for grad studies is just a substitute for what I really want to do."

Even though this mother-daughter duo is not typical, the two seem to have a good and working relationship.

"And I feel very lucky to be her mother," said Ruth.

Does Life Have Meaning For You?

The Catholic Church believes that life does (or should) have infinite meaning for all. And we believe that the spiritual component for this meaning is an active FAITH which one follows on a daily basis. For this reason the UNO Newman Club, in conjunction with St. Margaret Mary's Church, is offering a lecture-study-discussion series, FUNDAMENTALS OF THE CATHOLIC FAITH. This program will be held on Tuesday mornings at 10 a.m. and repeated on Thursday afternoons at 2 p.m. Other times can probably be made for anyone who would not be able to attend at one of these times. The series will begin on Tuesday, November 13th, and be repeated on Thursday, November 15th.

- For Catholics who may wish to build upon the knowledge of their Faith learned as a child.
- For Non-Catholics, especially those who have no active Church affiliation and who would wish to explore the teachings of the Catholic Church.
- Participation in this program entails NO OBLIGATION to become or remain a Catholic.
- All programs will be held in the Suneg Center (Basement of the Church). Enter through the East entrance.

Security to students: Prepare for wintertime

"Students should carry extra clothing in their cars, especially snow boots and gloves," advised Dave Castilow of Campus Security on the approaching winter months.

When asked about the rule on 24-hour parking, Castilow said that if a student is stuck in the parking lot he should get in touch with Campus Security. If the car can not be freed, the guards will make a note of it.

Castilow said students having car failure should get in touch with Campus Security immediately. Security has a truck that is equipped for jump-starting and a station wagon that has extra batteries and cables. He cautions against staying in a dead car for long periods of time.

Ed Bogard, Director of Plant Operations, said that the snow must accumulate three inches before the outside contractor will clear the roads. Before then, the Plant Operations crews will be clearing the snow from sidewalks and steps.

The crews have tractors and a Scout jeep to plow the sidewalks but a lot of the work has to be done by hand, he said.

Bogard said Plant Operations has no firm plan of snow removal because so many variables, such as wind and amount of snow, affect the operation.

One way for students to help, Bogard said, is to avoid blocking crosswalks around campus. That will facilitate the movement of the tractors and the Scout.

"I think the students at UNO are the best during this kind of weather, because they are used to it," said Bogard.

Let's tighten our belt before Legislature does

It's almost time for the Legislature to convene again, only about two months away. At the top of its agenda will be the issue of divvying up state funds.

Yes, the Legislature will once again decide how much of the state pie the University of Nebraska will get. And it's a great time for NU to be asking for a 15 percent budget increase for 1980-81.

The economic picture is not very bright. The recession hasn't improved and Wall Street financiers are discovering the road to wealth fraught with chuckholes while credit tightens up. The University may find its "credit" with the Legislature is tighter, too.

After all, the tax lid fever has caught on and constituents of legislators (1980 is an election year) and some lawmakers themselves undoubtedly believe that educational systems, and the University in particular, can make do with less.

We understand the University's argument, eloquently espoused by NU President Ronald Roskens, that we need the money. We agree — there are many projects the University needs funded to continue its goal of upgrading education at UNO, UNL and the Medical Center. However, it's going to take one heck of a public relations campaign to get the public to buy that assertion.

We can fight for the increase as hard as we can, but let's not ignore reality. The University must begin planning to do with less, we must be prepared if the legislative chamber door is shut in our face. The Board of Regents is being pragmatic and recognizing this distasteful possibility by ordering two additional budgets be drawn up — both based on budgets increases less than 15 percent — with 10 and seven percent hikes.

Let's all start tightening our belts now.

Senate should implement profound legislation

"To liberate means to set free, and to set free from something. It implies impediments to freedom having been thrown off; it can therefore be a matter of degree, and of a process. Thus, when a man succeeds in untying his wrists and liberating his arms, he can use his hands to liberate his feet from the shackles which bind them. But a man can be physically free from restraint and still be unfree if his mind is restricted by habits and attitudes which limit his humanity..."

"Education and Liberation"
Julius K. Nyerere

nopoly on the Student Senate — and your minds.

Next, keep in mind that you are here to serve the Student Body in general. Attack and dismiss that "buddy system" that is presently in operation. Be your own person and remember your reason for being there — keep in mind who put you there.

Third, your "education" now takes on a two-pronged meaning; your academic education is one part, and your "political education" is another part. However, view these two elements as overlapping realities rather than as separate entities. Your association. Therefore, in your position it is your duty and right to pursue any issue that is detrimental to any individual or faction of the Student body. Again, I quote Nyerere who contends, "the first essential of a liberated man is an awareness of two things: his own manhood, and the power of man to use circumstances, rather than to be used by them." These words will have more meaning and magnitude as you become more familiarized with the workings of the Student Senate.

Fourth, you must not be afraid to introduce or back new resolutions, proposals or programs. In the past, it would seem that we have chosen (or at least accepted) blind imitation over relevant initiative or rational adaptation. In your position, one that brings with it power and popularity, you are indeed, a "change-agent" — a person who seeks to "overturn" past mistakes and implement more profound legislation to take its place. In a word, it is as Cabral states — "...turning weakness into strength."

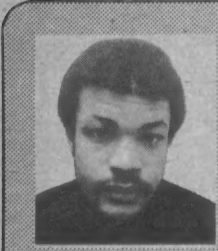

In conclusion, congratulations to the new Senators, for they represent the potential for a new future, a new relationship between the students and the faculty here at UNO. They are also more inclined to be objective and rational on key issues, for they are not bogged down in or controlled by the manipulative factions that exist in the present structure.

The issues that we now face are critical ones, for we are a part of the history-making process at this University. Never before has the Student Senate appeared to be as willing to work as this one; never before on this campus has there been so much cheating and child-like behavior taking place in the ranks of Student Government; and never before has the historical process offered us a better chance to exert that which is great in each and everyone of us.

The eyes of the entire campus are upon you at this time, and it might be nice if you would avoid the mistakes made by your predecessors. One way to see to it that this body of Senators functions fairly is to begin addressing this past election, with emphasis on 1) the race between candidates for the Student President Regent slot; 2) the ineptitude of at least three people on the election commission; 3) the poll workers and their tardiness and 4) the actions of the Senator who accepted premature voting results. As leaders we will be — and should be — criticized in the future if we now refuse to acknowledge the overwhelmingly obvious need for change. Pamoja Tutashinda (Together We Will Win)

Matthew C. Stelly

While this letter is aimed at the entire student population, its main thrust is an appeal to the new Senators of the Student Government, for it is this group that is confronted with the chance and challenge of confronting past contradictions and replacing these contradictions with concrete, humanitarian commitments and concepts.

While you have just entered office and might still be becoming familiar with parliamentary procedure, issues at hand and other similar policies, it is my contention that there are more "localistic" issues right here in our own "back yard" that must have priority over "controversial speakers" and other gargantuan "games" of this sort. This can and will be dealt with in the future. However, the past election, with emphasis on the position of President/Regent is being contested — and therefore should be confronted.

First, you must not become involved with the "cliquishness" that is so evident in Student Senate, for this will eventually be a liability. Avoid those narrow notions and sectarian sources that seek to "win you over", for they are self-serving and seek only to solidify their mo-academic education seeks to make you more aware of the society around you; your political education should be aimed at taking this awareness and using it to make that society a better place to live in.

In a campus context, this means that wherever there is an inequitable situation, you act on it; for refusal to act means that you aid and abet the culprit(s) in the crime — in a word, guilt by

The ADVENTURES IN ATTITUDES Program is a 30 hour course divided into 20 modules, presented in 10 sessions of 3 hours each or 3 sessions of 9 hours each. A qualified coordinator guides and times the participants through the 74 projects with the help of printed worksheets, printed supplementary reading materials, and 20 taped reinforcement messages.

Jackson ban just?

Basketball season is off with a bang at UNO.

Last year's sparkplug, All-NCC guard Derrick Jackson, has been dropped from the squad for an altercation during a practice.

As soon as the news hit the wires, rumors flew about as to the nature of the case, but many of those rumors were quickly dispelled when Jackson appeared on television explaining his side in the case.

According to Jackson, he and Coach Bob Hanson merely had a personality conflict that had been building. Hanson, meanwhile, would not talk about the specifics of the case but said he felt "it was for the best of the team."

It seems that what Hanson did was, indeed, best for the team. All reports indicate that Jackson's actions were flagrant and inexcusable.

If Jackson thought he was helping his case by going public with his side of the story on the day of the suspension, he may have been mistaken. Jackson's admittance of guilt in the practice incident and his revelation of differences of opinion with Hanson only made the coach's punishment seem more justified.

While most observers might agree that action against Jackson was necessary, the severity of the penalty is an aspect many question. Some critics wonder if a year-long suspension might be a bit steep for a player spitting on a teammate.

Jackson has conducted himself in a classy manner both on and off the court in the past, and perhaps his recent lapse, though distasteful in nature, is nothing more than a regrettable flareup.

If so, a full season's suspension seems too harsh.

However, maybe there is more to the case than just a player popping off in practice, something that, as Jackson said, has been building up.

If that is the case, more clarification is needed to justify the expulsion of the key player in last season's success story. Hanson and others have explained silence on the Jackson incident as a desire to keep the matter "in the family."

While the "basketball family" may seem to be sacred at this point, the fact that the team represents the larger "UNO family" dictates an explanation of the inner workings of the squad. UNO basketball is followed by thousands of students as well as fans from the surrounding area, and many feel left out when they are told the team they support is none of their business.

During the 1978 football season, defensive standout Duane Williams was dropped from the squad for disciplinary reasons, and a full explanation was presented. Furthermore, the door was left open for Williams' return, and he has made the most of the opportunity provided by Coach Sandy Buda.

Jackson can return to play basketball next season, but he would have to do so as a graduate student. Jackson may not have planned to do his graduate work at UNO, so the door left open to him may have been left ajar just slightly.

No one can doubt the need for disciplinary action in this matter, but as long as doubts exist about the severity of the penalty and the reasons for it, more discussion is needed.

Many fans would like to see Jackson's return to action this season, possibly in time for a repeat of last year's laurels. UNO is well stocked with fine guards, but Jackson has been one of the finest in UNO history and should be given further consideration upon making proper restitution for his offense.

Schoonover to nationals

Volleyballers 2nd in state

The Lady Maverick volleyball team won four of five matches last weekend to place second in the Nebraska AIAW State Championships held at Nebraska Wesleyan in Lincoln.

The two-day affair included pool play on Friday and final matches on Saturday. The Lady Mavs breezed through their pool, defeating Hastings (15-9, 15-9, 15-11) and the College of St. Mary's (15-13, 15-4, 15-13).

UNO beat Nebraska Wesleyan in the semi-finals in a best two-out-of-three match, sending them to the finals with 11 straight wins in the tournament. Kearney State came to the finals with just one game lost in their matches.

Mo Frenking's 22 service points helped the Lady Mavs to the finals.

Antelopes tough

In the final match, the Lady Mavs had a tough time defending against the Kearney State attack. Vicki Hamm led the UNO defense, blocking 15 kill shots, while Sue Wilwerding came on strong offensively, hammering 16 kill-spikes into the Kearney State court.

Despite a great team effort, the Lady Mavs dropped three straight games to the Antelopes, 15-12, 15-11, and 15-10. Nebraska Wesleyan finished third in the tourney, with St. Mary's fourth.

Both Kearney State and UNO qualified for the Region 6 Championships to be held in Warrensburg, Mo., November 15-17. The regional champion will then move on to the AIAW National Championships in Orlando, Fla.

Schoonover stars

While the Lady Mav volleyballers snared runner-up honors, UNO cross country ace Theresa Schoonover ran to a tenth place finish in the Region 6 Championships last weekend in Ames, Iowa.

Schoonover ran the 5,000-meter course in 19:07, not her best time of the year but fast enough to qualify her for the All-Region team and the AIAW National Cross Country Championships in Tallahassee, Fla., on November 17.

The Division II regional meet included 18 teams and 100 runners, with the top fifteen individuals qualifying for the nationals. UNO had four runners in the meet.

Barb Catlin ran a 19:51 to finish 26th, Kristi Grace was 31st with a 19:59, and Theresa Baumert came in 76th with a clocking of 21:51.

"The girls are pretty disappointed," said Coach Bob Condon of the three who did not qualify for the Nationals. "They could have run better and they know it. They really wanted to go to the Nationals."

Just pacing

Of Schoonover's finish, Condon said, "Terry was pacing herself. She was just trying to qualify. Now at the Nationals, you can bet she'll pull out all the stops and run for all she's worth."

In the team standings in the regional meet, South Dakota State finished first with 54 points, Mankato State was second with 58, and Kearney State took third place.

The Antelopes' third place finish was a hard pill for UNO to swallow as the Mavs have defeated Kearney State in two of three meets this season. "We are a caliber team that could have gone all the way," said Condon. "We just didn't run well enough on Friday."

Contractors gain 'B' playoffs

By PETE DESJARDINS
Gateway Sports Writer

In intramural football action, the Contractors, pre-season favorites in the 'B' league, wrapped up a playoff berth by slashing Pen & Sword, 12-0. The P&S defense played tough, but the Contractors Dan Kraft scored one touchdown, then another, and it was all she wrote for the well drilled Pen & Sword team.

The Contractors used ROTC as a warm up for their big game, demilitarizing the defenseless ROTC battalion, 30-0. Kraft and Mark Peizmeier navigated the Contractors bulldozer offense with 2 touchdowns apiece. Rich Holley also added a touchdown for the winners.

In the only other 'B' league game played last week, the Diablos, behind the league's leading scorer, Bob Kreiser, turned off the Not Ready for Prime Time Players, 14-6. Kreiser had a touchdown and a two-point conversion while Ed Romero added a score for the 4-1 Diablos. Kevin Leanna scored the only TD for the losers.

I Phelta Thi and 69ers met in head-to-head combat in last week's only 'A' league game. I Phelta Thi's pass-oriented offense was hard to beat, and the 69ers went down, 20-0. Art Moran, Dan Nealon, and Steve Foster each crossed the goal line for unbeaten I Phelta Thi.

Pi Kappa Phi caused rumblings in the Fraternity league, scoring a mild upset over wishy-washy Omega Psi Phi. Pi Kappa Phi pulled out a 7-6 victory in overtime, gaining 6 more yards than the Omega offense could muster. Tom Collins scored for Omega Psi Phi, while Steve Weldron had the winners' only touchdown.

Sig Eps, which has been a troubled team this year, gave the Pikes a run for their money before falling, 2-0. A first half safety was the only score either team could produce in a game plagued by torrential rains.

Lambda Chi's offense hit high gear and handed the Tekes yet another defeat, 26-0. Rich Dishler, Ed Krieger, John Finch, and Tom Gargano all scored touchdowns for 4-2 Lambda Chi.

One week remains in the flag football season, and of the four divisions, only the fraternity league championship is still in question. The league title depends on the outcome of this week's Lambda Chi-Sig Nu game. The Pikes are the third team still in contention for a post season spot.

At this point, it is time to take an overview of the three independent teams which will be gunning for the right to wear the redesigned "Intramural Champs" T-shirts.

I Phelta Thi, known last year as G.A.B., has averaged a shade over 15 points per game while giving up less than a point. I Phelta is led by quarterback Art "the Dart" Moran, who can pick from an array of capable receivers in Ed Pouster and Steve Foster. Dan Nealon, co-captain of the team, is one of the most dangerous breakaway running threats in the league.

An 'A' league powerhouse for 3 years, the Panthers can run a team into the ground or finesse them to death with short passes. They gave up just one touchdown all year and averaged a whopping 22 points per game, including a 52-point outburst against the Nukes. Robbie Bryant and Terrance Mackey supply the primary offensive punch, but eight different players have crossed the goal line for the Panthers this year.

Though the Contractors were in 'B' league, their competition was anything but second rate. The gutsy Contractor defense gave up an average of just one point per game, while the offense, led by Dan Kraft, Rick Holley and Mark Peizmeier ranks as one of the league's finest. The Contractors could be a dark horse team in the playoffs.

Mavs end season

The UNO Mavericks football squad will be out to finish the season with a rush in a quest to make the Division II playoffs. Tomorrow's opponents at Al Caniglia field will be the Huskies of St. Cloud State, who bring a 5-5 record into the UNO game.

Nine senior Mavericks may be making their last appearances in UNO uniforms: split end Joe Noonan, center Gary Vacha, tight end Ed Lenagh, defensive end Mike Williams, defensive end Pete Marinkovich, nose guard Duane Williams, defensive tackle and co-captain John Small, running back Bobby Bass, and co-captain and quarterback Mike Mancuso.

Despite a convincing win over the nationally third-ranked North Dakota Sioux last week, the Mavericks failed to crack the Division II top ten rankings, finishing in the 14th position.

Freshman nose guard Dan Sweetwood has moved into the starting defensive alignment on the basis of his outstanding performance in the North Dakota game. Sophomore Eric Daiker is now running at the No. 2 fullback spot.
